MORNING PLENARY SESSION

Focus: Cultivating a Culture of Inclusion and Belonging

The morning keynote wilflocus on building our capacity to create a more diverse and inclusive campus environment, a high value for Boston College. In order to live into this value, we will need to do more than make statements, post stickers, and read books. We will need toolbusidal pacity to practice the tools necessary for moving beyond performative diversity and inclusion to institutional and cultural transformation.

COMMUNITY OF PRACTICE DISCUSSION

The afternoon plenary, led by Rev. Dr. Jamie Washington, Keynote Speaker, provides an opportunity for participants to come together and examine what we have learned from the day. The discussion focuses of how we build the capacity to individing and collectively cultivate a culture of inclusion and belonging.

Dr. Jackson won afive-year leadership grant from the US Department of Education to train eight SRVWGRFWRUDO 38'/)HOORZV´ZKRVH HIIRUWV FRQWLQXH WI students with disabilities. With the intermatial call for inclusive education, UDL has emerged as a plausible and palpable implementation framework. In 2020, with colleague Sean Bracken from the University of Worcester in the UKDr. Jackson colounded INCLUDE (the National Collaboratory for Leadhepsin Universally Designed EducationDr. -DFNVRQ¶V YLVLRQ IRU ,1&/8'(LV D 3FH functions virtually as a community of practice among stakeholders committed to advancing inclusion world wide 8'/¶ twenty-yearpresence at Boston Oedge under Dr. -DFNVRQ¶V OHDGHUVKLS KD in the design of accessible blended learning courses and in the development of inclusive instructional practices campus wide. It serves as a striking example of what the university means by where meaning the service to others where others include individuals with disabilities.
