3. Create opportunities to share experiences

Dean Clarke is working on changing the curriculum of First Year Nursing Seminar to include more reflection, community building, and academic success components

The SCRUBS Retreat is now a 1-credit requirement for all sophomore level students.

SCRUBS retreat helps to create a space where students can be vulnerable and share openly about the icex

4. Summarize CSON IDI assessment results

T Nguyen provided a summary of the Faculty & Staff IDI results, highlighting the Intercultural Development Continuum. She asked attendees to provide suggestions on: (1) realistic goals for moving forward and (b) institutional changes that you would like to make at CSON in order to create a more culturally competent environment. Below are some of the responses from faculty:

J. Shindul-Rothschild suggested that it is too early for us to determine realistic goals. It will be helpful to know what an looks like, before we can make any meaningful determinations.

We should share IDI results with students

Have more theme weeks and diversity campaigns to promote awareness (i.e.

Create or promote more service learning opportunities

Host more social and cultural events to celebrate differences

Recognize more cultural holidays throughout the semester

Coordinate more events for student to connect and learn about each other

Encourage faculty members to collaborate on lesson planning and teaching classes together to cofacilitate conversations on cultural competency.

Some felt that the IDI had a strong emphasis on race. A suggestion was made to incorporate more social identifiers into future conversations around diversity and inclusion.
