

"It was either go home and call it a day, or stay. I decided to stay. Ulia ston College law. "Ultimately, I just want to be as useful and doing worked briefly in a spent two

h

a,

more than she had originally thought, in the form of exploitation

. With little help from the police and resistance from the orphanage director, she newspaper and, ultimately, federal authorities, and after a year the orphanage was opened "not for profit" orphanage," Kido said, in but a homot and experience, she said, was a legal t and worked at a personal injury firm ion of the Committee for Public Counsel g people with still-developing brains and d to their conversations with lawyers and